

Not content with merely organising live comedy events by world-class talent, Go Faster Stripe brings you our favorite acts captured by other people's (rather inferior) recordings, starting with this formidable The Twelve Tasks of Hercules Terrace (recorded by a YTS person on someone's mum's phone camera). Herring shares with us his mission to make something of his sad comedian's existence through a catalogue of seemingly impossible challenges. So will he succeed in running the London marathon, going skydiving, and dating 50 women in 50 nights? Or will he fail in his vain attempt to prove his superiority to the Greek demi-god? And does stealing Germaine Greer's bra strictly count as a Herculean task? Yes, I suppose it does...

HISTORICAL QUALITY WARNING While perfectly watchable, this DVD was recorded on low grade video cameras, and as such the picture is a bit grainy. And while you can hear everything, the sound is pretty lo-fi too.

Herring has taken comedy show to its extreme and the gods should justly reward him  Metro / Triumphantly funny Evening Standard / For a show ostensibly about depression, this is a remarkably feel good night out Chortle / Herring proves there is little that a nice obsessive compulsive disorder can't fix Sunday Times
