

In 2004 indie legend MJ Hibbett had one of the world's first ever internet viral hits when b3ta.com's Rob Manuel made a video for his song 'Hey Hey 16K'.

Now, over several years later, he's used the song as the basis for a two-man musical in which he goes back in time to visit a teenage version of himself, played by his friend Steve.

The show features home computers, time travel, advice on beer, a biography of Ada Lovelace, a metric tonne of songs, tap dancing, dad jokes, and maybe even a happy ending.

As well as the full-length stage show, this DVD includes the original 'Hey Hey 16K' video, behind the scenes clips, and three ZX Spectrum programs.

"An hour of uplifting comedy, interspersed with very funny songs" - Everything Theatre

"You're pretty much guaranteed to love this funny, inspiring show" - Fringe Guru
